

I get my internet service from an independent ISP called "Sonic.net." The service they provide is far, far better than what I could get from the sole major provider in my area. I am afraid that deregulating DSL would make it impossible for independent ISPs such as Sonic.net to continue operation in my area. This would be a great loss to California consumers.